

Distributor Owned Material Tracking

Both vendor and customer distributor definitions can be created and each of these distributors have the ability to maintain their own inventory, using the functions provided in special distributor workbenches.

Customer distributors can manage their own sales orders and have the ability to request and replenish their inventory from the users inventory systems. In the same manner, vendor distributors can replenish their inventories by purchasing material from their suppliers and the user can then order material from the distributor as required.

The MRP or DRP system will, optionally, incorporate the distributor inventories into the master plan and also has the ability to try to balance the customer distributor inventories by planning requisitions that will move material between the various distributors.

Although the system has the ability to track the distributor inventories, all of this inventory value and inventory movement will be recorded at no cost and will not appear as a part of the user's accounting activity.
