Line Item Specification (Attribute) Definitions

When selling items that require specific specifications (referred to as attributes in the Info.Net documentation) such as color, dimensional limits, chemical levels, etc, any number of these types of previously defined specifications) can be defined as a part of the items being sold. Every inventory item can be assigned any number of attributes, each of which can be defined by limits or by specific values.

When defining the order, the user can specify the limits or specific value for each of the sales order item's attributes, and when the units are shipped, the system will ensure that the shipped units meet the order's requirements.
